Forest Hills Elementary School	Strongly Agree	It supported the realistic fiction topic we just did. It also had a setting, clearly identified characters, and a sequence of events. These are all parts of standards that we are required to teach.	Strongly Agree	Per my Students: Student A "It was very fun and I liked the singing. I have never seen a puppet sing. Well last year I did and I am happy I saw it again: Student B "I thought that it was cool to see a different story this year and in first grade" Per me as the teacher: My students do not have the opportunity to go out to a live entertainment show due	The man who came to our school this year, (and last year) is amazing! He is so patient with the students and clearly has passion for what he does.
Alafia Elementary School	Strongly Agree	This aligned with our current target of determining the moral of a story.	Strongly Agree	The students were delighted by the presentation and fascinated with the demonstration of the	Excellent production!

Alafia Elementary	Strongly Agree	Story retelling, literature.	Strongly Agree	The children were engaged the entire time, laughing and clapping.	My students continued to talk about the puppet show throughout the day. They enjoyed creating the puppet scene and reenacting the Alafia Elementary	Strongly Agree	The program was able to support our study on story elements ... characters, setting, plot. We also have been discussing in class how characters can change throughout a story, and discuss what events in the story made them change. This story presented a great example! We researched marionettes before coming to the show so it was an	Strongly Agree	Most of my class had never seen a puppet show or had a theater experience. We discussed etiquette during shows, and it was a very good discussion. They loved the marionettes, and were amazed at how they were made.	We really enjoyed it, and the students came back to the room and wrote about the show. Great responses! Keep up the great work! You are so talented and your enthusiasm with what you do shines brightly in your show!

Trapnell	Strongly Agree	Wonderful	Strongly Agree	They loved it.	We would love to have this again next year and we would love to have this presenter come back to show us more puppet shows. He did a great job &
Trapnell Elementary	Agree	Social Emotional Learning, Vocabulary, Fictional Story Telling, Rhyme Scheme, and	Agree	My students enjoyed the learning about the lesson to be learned in the story; to share.
Trapnell	Strongly Agree	good for storytelling, setting, characters, etc.	Strongly Agree	The kids loved it. Many had not seen a puppet show. It was a good experience for them. The gentleman was very

Trapnell	Agree	Use of imagination and interaction with	Strongly Agree	Allowed students to experience a puppet
Trapnell Elementary	Strongly Agree	Teaches SEL - social emotional learning (it's wrong to be selfish), storytelling, sequences of story events, and tells	Strongly Agree	They learned about Marionettes and how to tell a story using puppets.	We will definitely invite Mr. Bickel back for additional puppet shows.
Trapnell Elementary	Strongly Agree	Encourages children to creative play through	Strongly Agree	their first puppet show	Nothing
Trapnell Elementary	Agree	The actor did a great job emphasizing elements of a story - especially a fairy tale.	Strongly Agree	The art of puppetry is not something children are exposed to very often any more. This experience allowed them to see a play presented

LaVoy ESE Center	Strongly Agree	The story was about the importance of sharing and friendships. This is pertinent to our social emotional curriculum.	Strongly Agree	Great program!	Hope we can have a return visit.
LaVoy Exceptional Center	Agree	Most of our students need a visual representation of text to better comprehend it.	Agree	It brought what is typically seen as a boring piece of writing to life, literally. Having that visual experience is beneficial for many of	Thank you so very much for your time and wonderful performance.
LaVoy Exceptional center	Agree	There were many aspects of citizenry taught during the show. And also a practical side where he showed how he did the acting and produced the set.	Strongly Agree	They learned some good morals from the story on how to share, they also learned that you can build things yourself for specific purposes, and that if you really want to do something you can	I would recommend this person for any exceptional center. The attention of the children was locked on this man and his show.
LaVoy Exceptional I	Strongly Agree	This program supports literacy comprehension, sequencing (beginning, middle, end), and vocabulary. It also encompasses social emotional learning.	Strongly Agree	I'm confident that the majority of our students had never seen a puppet show prior to this. The presentation enabled them to have a new experience in a safe place.	Mr. Bickle was so great with our students and allowed them to touch and interact with the marionettes. Hands down one of the best in-house field trips we have had in my seven years at LaVoy! He is welcome back
LaVoy	Strongly Agree	The majority of our students cannot read. Having a book brought to life in front of them, makes them want to know more. We can use the puppet show as a reference point when	Strongly Agree	Seeing a book brought to life was an incredible experience for many of our students. Having different mediums for our students, who are mostly non-verbal with significant cognitive	Thank you for providing this for our students.

Twin Lakes Elementary School	Strongly Agree	First and foremost, the puppet show was a wonderment for the students. I can still hear the oooh's and aaaaahs from both groups. Jerry Bickel provided a love for storytelling, an interest in a new medium, a connection to the characters through voice and then letting the students understand the 'workings' of the puppets afterwards.	Strongly Agree	The students' hands instantly were raised with so many questions about how he creates them, what makes them work, which is his favorite, where does the music come from and how does the peach come out of the tree. As these students are beginning to develop STEM and makerspace ideas as part of their own expression of understanding; Jerry helped them vision	Both groups of teachers sent a text or email to the principal before the show was even completed with how wonderful the program was. Students who typically are difficult to engage or stay on task were visually glued to the production. This was not expected by two different teachers. Support Staff and upper grade levels happen to walk into the Media Center during the performance and their faces displayed pure amazement!
Sessums Elementary School	Strongly Agree	The show today, The Selfish Giant, went right along with our Kindness Week theme. It is a perfect lesson to extend what we try to instill	Strongly Agree	The play teaches the importance of sharing and being kind.
Sessums	Agree	It is an enrichment to our ELA benchmarks	Strongly Agree	It is a memorable experience. Especially to those who may not be able to experience seeing a puppeteer play
